Flyabout* tells the autobiographical story of Monika Petrillo's journey piloting a small single-engine airplane around the continent of Australia. Her father, a pilot with limited experience himself, is riding shotgun.

As the only woman pilot in a group of eleven people, Monika sets out to experience the true freedom of flight above one of the most untouched places on earth. The idea of the Walkabout, a spiritual journey Aborigines have valued for thousands of years, further inspires her to seek an elusive spiritual experience herself.

However, a tight schedule, mechanical failures, sudden loss of visibility and unpredictable crosswinds keep her both too busy and too uptight. But what impacts her most is the unexpected conflict that arises between her father and herself.

Following Film – Q&A Discussion with Director Monika Petrillo

Born in Munich, Germany, Monika Petrillo moved to the United States in 1991 and has established herself as a highly respected script supervisor in the film industry. Her personal and professional travels have taken her to far-flung destinations like Namibia, Japan, Costa Rica and Vietnam. Working as writer, director, DP, editor and producer, “Flyabout” marks her directorial debut.
